

Workers' Compensation Claims

Get more reimbursement by eliminating incorrectly paid workers' comp claims.

Due to time-intensive processes and changing requirements, many facilities struggle to collect appropriate revenue from workers' compensation claims. Too often, these claims are slow paid, underpaid or erroneously denied—but facilities rarely have the time or resources to pursue further reimbursement.

Should You Outsource Your Workers' Comp Claims?

Without a single, consistent set of rules, 80% of workers' comp claims are paid incorrectly. When trying to collect reimbursement, facilities have to follow complicated processes, including:

- Verifying with employer and receiving authorization
- Completing labor-intensive claims
- Following strict fee schedules, which vary by state
- Working with insurance adjusters, plaintiff attorneys, and the patient/patient's family
- Adhering to state reporting requirements

The Aspiration Difference

Workers' compensation is a legal process with healthcare elements—which means successful reimbursement requires expert practices from both industries. Our dedicated process involves:

- Investigating and determining the correct payor and/or potential additional insurances timely to eliminate aging
- Obtaining necessary paperwork to submit clean claims
- Aggressively following up on a claim until it is resolved
- Providing attorney support when necessary to represent the provider as a direct party to ensure payment
- Pursuing penalties and interest whenever appropriate
- Providing free hospital staff training to help eliminate reasons for slow/non-payment

Maximize Your Workers' Comp Claims Reimbursement

It's difficult to get your workers' comp claims paid timely and to know whether your workers' comp claims are being paid correctly—which means you could be missing out on revenue without realizing it.
